

Not understanding the issues thoroughly does not prohibit me from noticing that localism suffers as consolidation continues. I believe from watching the issues that a vote has been called for by some members of congress regarding this consolidation. I encourage that vote and hope that it will occur SOON. I truly believe that circumstances such as the Super Bowl controversy are linked to the notion of repercussion and responsibility. When there are so many layers placed between the consumer and the responsible party it seems that everyone falls thru the cracks by pointing the finger at someone else. Doesn't anyone have responsibility for anything anymore? I am very upset by the trend that the media is taking but really don't know who to complain to about this. No one will admit any culpability. We should all be like Dr. Dean who clearly states "This is me. I did it. I own it". How refreshing.
